Adrian Grilli, Managing Director, JRC

Adrian Grilli is Managing Director of the Joint Radio Company Ltd (JRC) based in London. JRC is a joint venture between National Grid and the UK Energy Networks Association, representing UK gas and electricity generation, transmission and distribution industries' radio communications interests. JRC's prime responsible is managing radio spectrum used by these industries to support critical network operations.

As the importance of utility communications networks has grown, JRC has become increasingly active internationally, participating in a number of European and international groups investigating communications and spectrum options for smart grids.

Mr Grilli is a past chairman of the UK Federation of Communications Services, on the Board of the European Utilities Telecommunications Council and a regular contributor to the US Utility Telecom Council. He is a Chartered Engineer and Member of the Institutions of Mechanical Engineers and Engineering & Technology.
