Kadri Kaska, Senior Analyst, Cooperative Cyber Defence Centre of Excellence, Estonia
Kadri Kaska is a legal and policy analyst at the NATO Cooperative Cyber Defence Centre of Excellence, based in Tallinn, Estonia. She holds a Master's degree from the University of Tartu, Estonia, and has previously served as a legal adviser to the national communications regulatory authority, participating in the drafting of national telecommunications legislation and advising on communications resource management and competition issues. She has worked at the NATO Cooperative Cyber Defence Centre of Excellence since 2008, specialising in communication and information systems law, law of cyber crime, and cyber aspects of national security law. Her current research interests include national cyber security strategies as well as organisational cyber security models employed by nations.